He's called "Hot Shot" in the war zone in Vietnam because he has to fight to go to war, fight to get into the war and fight to stay there. Then he has to fight to get out of the war.

Because war is not like life - one damn thing after another - but one dead man after another, one moment of terror, one firefight, one instant of courage, one demand to be true after another, all of it wild, crazy and nonstop. Hot Shot stands in the dragon's breath of the Second Tet Offensive with Boomerang the mute radioman, a battalion surgeon who masturbates under the barracks floor, helicopter gunner Simon Bolliver Jones IV who dreams of marrying every starlet who sends him a sexy photo, the Lost Lieutenant who walks home across the Pacific Ocean and two stone killers named Pinch and Cassidy who guarantee to see Hot Shot home alive because they want him to win the war for them.

Especially for those who do not know war or who may face going to war, this novel is a guide to the meaning of war and the harsh trials faced by soldiers in combat and in how they learn to conduct themselves in war.
