A thirty-year saga unfolds during one of the most tumultuous and significant times in Spanish history: 1492-1522. At the beginning of this period, King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella intensify the brutal and barbaric Spanish Inquisition, forcing Spain to become a Christian nation. Together, they support a concerted effort to find a competitive trade route to the Indies only to unexpectedly discover the New World. During this time, the life of a Jewish boy, Andrés Crescas, changes forever when a Catholic Church inquisitor shows up at his family's doorstep in search of non-believers. Andrés avoids captivity by running away. As he grows into manhood in hiding, he decides to set out for the New World. On his voyage he meets a young man also seeking adventure and fame—Hernando Cortés. The two muster a following and march on the powerful Aztec Empire in their quest. But all is not peaceful within their little group. Hernando is being pursued as a traitor to Spain while Andrés is desperate to avoid revealing that he is a Jew. Both are trying to stay alive while fighting the mighty warriors of a civilization unlike any they have ever seen.
