Living with Wildfires: Prevention, Preparation and Recovery Janet C. Arrowood

A one-stop guide for everyone who lives in or near wildland areas and whose lives may be impacted by wildfires in North America. It also serves as an important educational reference that fire fighters, fire departments, community associations, city, county and federal agencies, and international fire fighting organizations can use to instruct the public in how to prevent, prepare for, and recover from wildfires.

This book is a comprehensive look for what a homeowner needs to understand if you live in the wildland/urban interface area ... an important tool for increasing the survivability of your home and the safety of you and your family. - From the Foreword by Justin Dombrowski, internationally known champion of wildfire prevention and Wildland Fire Management Officer in CO.
