"Search For Understanding", a critique of organized religion, makes the case that the Institutional Church is moribund! The traditional requirements of belief are not only seen as untenable, boring and irrelevant, but are an actual obstruction to a magical adventure of discovering the source of love, compassion, justice and respect for life. The centrepiece of the Good News is not the narrow focus of "Jesus dying for our sins", nor the negativity of a religious culture obsessed with guilt and future rewards, but the gift of the Divine Spirit, which trusts the potential of humanity to develop to its fullness, and empowers love. It is our response to that extraordinary gift in relationships and social justice that the world can be changed. This book re-interprets the Christian faith, but the Divine Presence is universal in all people, beyond any particular faith or the absence of faith.
