BACK TO SCHOOL BOOK DRIVE! For every planner sold in August and September, another will be donated to a special ed department for a student to use!

This planner is suited to the organization and communication needs of autistic students, but any student who needs a better planner tool can benefit. Not only does it provide open spaces to write down homework assignments or tests, it contains reminder spaces to help your student write down important notes, give you an indication of how his school day went, and more. There is space to draw and color during times of stress, as well as fun conversation starters at the end of each week.

I designed this planner for my own child because I was tired of the useless calendar the school sold at the start of each year. Even worse, the autism-centric tools I find are usually covered in rainbows, balloon letters, cartoon children in wheelchairs (for some reason), or puzzle piece logos. I wanted a planner my daughter wouldn't mind having on her desk at school, so this cover is purposely designed for kids who are growing up and want to be treated like it.
